

CHLD 209: Child, Family and Community

Abuse and Neglect

Learning Outcomes	5. Describe and demonstrate skills that are necessary for professionals within early childhood education to work together as a team, to collaborate, and to advocate in ways that are responsive to the diversity and complexity of each family's system.
DEC Recommended Practices	F7. Practices, supports and resources support family participation in obtaining desired resources and supports to strengthen parenting competence and confidence.
NAEYC Standards	6b. Knowing about and upholding ethical standards and other professional guidelines.

This assignment consists of two parts. In Part One, you are required to analyze a case study in terms of (1) the signs of abuse and neglect presented; (2) the risk factors, stressors, and challenges associated with abuse and neglect; and (3) the role of the professional in supporting families. In Part Two, you will be responsible for creating your own case study and completing the same analysis.

Part One: Case Study Scenario

Consider the following scenario:

Jane has been arrested and charged with child endangerment, child neglect, and child physical abuse. Her 16-month-old son was found alone at 9 pm at night with a rope around his waist tied to a sofa. He had severe rope burns on his stomach and side and had a bruise on the front of his face and a split lip, probably from falling down face first. Her child has been placed in foster care.

Looking further into the case: Jane is a 22-year-old mother of Joe, who is 16 months old. Jane is a single parent, and only has a high-school diploma. Because of the harsh economic times, Jane works two jobs just to pay the bills, but she is still struggling. Jane is new to the community and doesn't know anyone yet. She sends Joe to daycare during the day, but she works a second job a few evenings a week and can't afford to pay someone to watch Joe. Jane loves her son very much and wants to make sure he's okay while she's gone in the evenings for a short time, but knows she can't let him run around by himself. To keep him "safe," Jane ties a rope around Joe's waist and gives him plenty of room in the living room. She ties the other end to the leg of the sofa. This way, Joe is only allowed in certain areas of the room, and can't be harmed. (adapted with permission from Hernandez, 2008)

Assignment Part One:

After reviewing this scenario, respond to the following questions. Incorporate and cite at least two course resources in your response.

1. What factors indicated abuse and neglect was present?
2. What risk factors, stressors, and challenges were faced by Jane in her parenting situation?
3. How might understanding these risk factors, stressors, and challenges help you support Jane within your professional role?
4. What strategies would you use to ensure that Jane and her son receive the support they need?

Assignment Part Two:

- Create a case study (250 words or more) based on one of the categories of abuse. The case study you create should include both the scenario and the explanation. In your case example,
 1. give the scenario and
 2. look further into the case and explain the situation. (Note: the case study should include a family member and child).
- Following the development of your case study, respond to each of the following questions. Incorporate and cite at least two course resources in your response.
 1. Describe the factors that indicate abuse and neglect was present.
 2. Describe the risk factors, stressors, and challenges the family member faced in his or her parenting situation.
 3. How does understanding these risk factors, stressors, and challenges help you support the family member within your professional role?
 4. Give two strategies that you would use to ensure that the family member and their child receive the support they need.
