Georgia State Sued For Copyright Infringement

Earlier this year Georgia State University was sued by three major university publishers for alleged copyright infringement. The question arises over fair use of online reading materials and the widespread availability of these instructional items. School officials assert that the online distribution of these materials falls under fair use. This lawsuit may have a major impact on digital distribution of materials on college and university campuses nationwide.

Copyright Workshop

Wednesday 11.19.2008 Noon-1:00 pm Held in SCB 2401

Bring Your Copyright Questions.

For more information contact:
Rachelle Stivers
Director of Library and Information Services x.8274